Task 3 - 4: READING COMPREHENSION

Task 3: The royals need to get over how they're depicted in The Crown

Read the following article. Choose which of the sentences A – G from the box best fits into the numbered 1 – 6 gaps. There is one extra sentence which does not fit any of the gaps. Write the corresponding letter A – F on the Answer Sheet.

The task begins with an example (0).

Remember to write your answers on the separate Answer Sheet.

(0) D In the latest season, everyone is wondering what to do with the clapped-out royal yacht Britannia. (1) _____ “It shouldn’t come as a surprise she’s falling apart, she’s a creature of another age... in many ways she’s obsolete,” says Prince Philip, definitely talking about a big, expensive boat. “Don’t say that!” the Queen flaps, definitely also talking about a boat. The show is filled with analogies so bold you could spot them from space. In another zinger, Diana’s Panorama interview is compared to Guy Fawkes’s gunpowder plot. (2) _____ Why, when it’s so clearly on the royals’ side?

... In fact, when Prince Harry described The Crown as “fictional, but it’s loosely based on the truth”, it was surprising. (3) _____ He added that he was “way more comfortable with The Crown than I am seeing stories written about my family or my wife”. For him, worse things have been reported in the news as fact. (4) _____ Spencer basically made the family look like characters from The League of Gentlemen. In Diana: The Musical, a crime against not just the royal family but all of humanity, Charles and Camilla were described respectively as “a third-rate Henry VIII” and “Godzilla”.

By comparison, The Crown is soft on the royals. Yes, some of it is made up. Some of it is unflattering. (5) _____ “Sucking Sarah’s toes, Mummy!” Prince Andrew squeaks in one scene, while informing the Queen about a now infamous Fergie-related front page. Everyone knows the Nineties were a nightmare for the royals, but perhaps the kinder social values of our time will change how we view their experiences. If so, I suspect we’ll find much of what they endured more problematic than a made-up TV show. The Crown destroying the Queen? Are you kidding? A TV show? (6) _____

- A. He admitted it gave a “rough idea” of the pressures of being a royal.
- B. She went through worse.
- C. It’s the Nineties, and the monarchy is looking a bit worn out, too.
- ~~D. The Crown loves a metaphor.~~
- E. But it’s also about lots of things that, unbelievably, actually happened.
- F. And yet people still love to take this show very, very literally.
- G. It’s not that simple.
- H. And there are far nastier depictions of the royals in culture, too.

Task 3 and 4: READING COMPREHENSION
Task 4: ‘Prepare to be blown away – literally’ readers’ favourite trips in Ireland Read the following list of the best holiday tips about Ireland. For questions 1 – 6 on the next page, choose one of the people A – F that best matches each question. Write the corresponding letter A – F on the Answer Sheet. The task begins with an example (0). Remember to write your answers on the separate Answer Sheet.
A Alina We stumbled upon the 300-metre Aillte Chiarraí (Kerry Cliffs) by chance and the views across to Puffin Island and far out to Skellig Michael are spectacular. Prepare to be blown away, quite literally. We were greeted by an epic wall of wind that nearly sent us horizontal; we were laughing tears and managed to enact a buddy system just as our 12-year-old began to levitate. A truly breathtaking discovery, though not for sophisticated hairdos.	B Bernarda The Great Western Greenway is a 27-mile off-road cycle and walking track on the route of a disused railway line that stretches from Westport to Achill Island, taking in Newport and Mulranny along the way. It’s a gorgeous route with views over the Atlantic out to the islands of Clew Bay. It’s mainly flat so even the not-so-fit can do it. There are bike hire companies in Westport, and you can either cycle out from Westport and then be brought back in a van by the hire company (about €45 including bike hire) or do it the other way round – go out in the van to Achill Island and cycle back into Westport for dinner.

Donegal offers some of the best walking holidays in Ireland. Errigal, at 751 metres and the tallest of the Seven Sisters range, is an excellent mountain hike with views of ocean and islands that reward all your efforts. It is on the edge of Glenveagh national park close to the Irish-speaking Gaeltacht of Gaoth Dobhair. When you make it back down, take the short trip to Glebe House, the former home of artist Derek Hill, now an art gallery with beautiful gardens and a perfect place for lunch.	I was fortunate to spend a few days in the seaside village of Portnoo, which made a great jumping-off point for exploring the multitude of white sand beaches – many of which wouldn't have looked out of place in southern Italy. Dooley beach was a particular highlight and, other than a few surfers, was all but empty during my visit. The challenging but rewarding Wild Atlantic Way stretches along the coast and can be tackled in short stages. Proper pubs are abundant but Nancy's in Ardara had the combination of excellent beers, food, and craic.
E Edith	F Freddie
Edged by the dramatic Cliffs of Moher, the lunar-like landscape of the Burren is a very special place. Wonderful hikes through this karst landscape in late spring offer the chance to see a unique variety of exquisite alpine flowers and orchids, wild goats, and beautiful butterflies. Fascinating ancient burial sites abound. The Burren Perfumery is a gorgeous stop, with perfumes and candles inspired by the landscape and a lovely rose-covered tearoom and garden serving delicious organic food. Travelling through these 138 square miles is seeing Ireland at her loveliest and wildest.	Last year we picked up hire bikes in Dublin and jumped on the train to Galway. We spent two nights in the beautiful town enjoying the amazing food, drinks, the coastline and, most importantly, the music scene. Every pub seemed to have a band playing every night. We then spent two days cycling coast to coast on quiet roads back to Dublin, stopping en route in Athlone, where we came across what is said to be the oldest pub in Ireland, Sean's Bar. The second day saw us cycle along the Old Rail Trail Greenway and the Royal Canal Greenway from Athlone all the way to Dublin. The route was traffic-free with regular stops for coffee or Guinness.

When talking about holiday spots in Ireland, which person

Task 7: The story of Shazia Ramzan

Read the following text. For gaps 1 – 8, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) that best fits each numbered space.

The task begins with an example (0).

Remember to write your answers on the separate Answer Sheet.

The story of Shazia Ramzan, Malala's schoolfriend, shows why education must be a right for all children

Shazia Ramzan has spent most of her young life (0) B for her right – and the right of all girls – to go to school. In 2012, at the age of 14, sitting alongside her friend Malala Yousafzai on a bus that was going from school to her home, in the Swat valley in the north of Pakistan, she was shot at by an extremist intent on stopping girls from getting an education. She suffered injuries from which she, Malala and their friend Kainat (1) _____ months to recover.

Now completing a nursing degree at Edinburgh University, and preparing to start her own nurses' training school in Pakistan, Shazia almost always has the needs of girls in her home area in her thoughts. In her time between classes, she is (2) _____ funds for Pakistani charities that are quietly but effectively helping Afghan girls who have been losing out on their education since the Taliban (3) _____ them out of the country's secondary schools.

There are 5 million girls in Afghanistan who are currently out of school, and they urgently need our support. Many have risked everything by demonstrating in the streets of Kabul. While sooner or later the regime will find that they cannot forever (4) _____ brave women who have known what it is like to be free, for now the young protesters face arrest and torture. Theirs is an untold story of courage and resilience. Girls in Afghanistan are also at risk of punishment beatings if they attend underground schools run by their parents and teachers. Many more are (5) _____ across the border into exile in Pakistan in the hope of an education.

A large number of children today, though, are exiled from their homes not because of war but because they are the victims of droughts, floods and other climate-(6) _____ disasters, or of natural disasters. In Turkey and Syria, the dead are still being counted, but we must also address the urgent needs of the living, all those forcibly displaced by a 7.8-magnitude earthquake from which it will take years to recover. Even if we manage to feed, shelter and treat the victims, there will be (7) _____ cash left over to provide temporary schooling, unless we do better than in the past; the child victims of the earthquake could spend years excluded from education.

But hope can come alive, even in the harshest and least promising places in the world, if we offer children the chance of an education. It is the one way to honour the international community's as yet unredeemed promise set out in (8) _____ development goal 4 – to be the first generation in history where every single boy and girl, stateless or not, goes to school. As Shazia's work of mercy reminds us, it is also a moral obligation that we owe to the next generation. Instead of developing some of the potential of only some children in some parts of the world, we should be developing the potential of every child everywhere.

Adele says New Year's Eve has 'always been a let down' for her

Adele has spoken candidly about her (0) previous "disappointing" New Year's Eve celebrations while announcing her plans to celebrate the end of 2022 on stage.

The "Easy on Me" singer, 34, who recently kicked (1) _____ her long-awaited Las Vegas residency at The Colosseum at Caesars Palace to widespread acclaim, revealed on Instagram on Sunday that she (2) _____ for sure be adding two New Year's Eve shows.

"New Year's Eve has always been a let down for me, I seem to always end up spending it in a car on my way to or from somewhere! But not this year!!" Adele wrote on Instagram. "I'll be ringing 2023 in (3) _____ stage!!"

In the post, Adele then revealed that she usually (4) _____ up "to the nines" on New Year's Eve, before requesting fans who (5) _____ the newly added concert do the same. "Let's go all-out black-tie vibes," she added.

The newly added shows will (6) _____ place on 30 and 31 December, with Billboard noting that presale for those registered through Ticketmaster's Verified Fan program will begin at 10am PT on Wednesday 23 November.
